Abstract:
Software Defined Radio (SDR) and Cognitive Radio are future technologies that provide a more flexible design for the wireless and mobile industry, and at the same time these technologies enable the efficient utilization of frequency resources. However, correct deployment of the technologies requires radical changes in the regulatory framework of frequency management.