

Biography – Juhee Kang ITU

Juhee Kang is a Junior Researcher on Special Services in the ITU Asia Pacific Area Office. She has been working on the preparation of the ITU Regional Development Forum Asia Pacific and ITU-ASEAN Mobile Commerce Forum 2009, including background papers and research on the country case studies.

She holds a Bachelor's degree in Public Administration from Yonsei University in South Korea, and a Master's degree in International Communications and Development from City University in London, UK, where she also researched policy frameworks for the transition to digital broadcasting. She was a research analyst at Samsung Electronics Research Institute in the UK, investigating the emerging mobile technologies and services as well as the market strategies. She is currently a PhD candidate of the Department of Telecommunications, Information Studies and Media at Michigan State University, USA. Her research is focused on the dynamic interrelations between telecommunications policy, industry, and user needs in the area of ICTs for Development.