

Dr. Ahmed ELHEFNAWY
Senior Advisor for Arab States, BDT/ITU

At present he is working in International Telecommunication Union (ITU) – Arab Regional office, Cairo, Egypt as Senior Advisor for Arab States in the Development Sector (BDT).

He has held many positions in government ministries, academic institutions and private companies. He worked with ministry of communication and information technology of Egypt since 2002, where he developed several strategic plans for ICT development of government entities including ministry of industry, ministry of tourism and national postal organization. He served also as vice chairman of the later and responsible for strategic planning, organization development, IT systems and international cooperation. From 1988 to 2002, he has established and managed several private companies for design, development and support of electronics systems and media. He also served as the executive manager of technology development program in the Information and Decision Support System of the Cabinet in 1994 and as a senior advisor for ministry of industry and technology development in 1999-2000.

He served as an assistant professor in Faculty of Engineering, Cairo University, Egypt, since 1987, where he graduated in 1980 with Distinction and Honor Degree. He got his M.Sc. from University of Miami, Coral Gables, Florida, U.S.A. in 1982 and his Ph.D. from Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, U.S.A. in 1987.