Mr. Juan Peirano

I work as Director, Technical Policy at the Internet Society, focusing on policy issues related to interconnection infrastructure, access technologies, sustainable connectivity models and Internet governance. I aspire to help connect as many people as possible the great resource that it is the Internet.

I've been an active participant in the Internet ecosystem and telecommunications industry for more than 12 years, working in cross-cutting roles between public policy and engineering.

I'm a Telecommunications Engineer from ORT University in Montevideo, Uruguay, and have a MPP from the University of Bristol in the United Kingdom.
