

Ms. Polina Sokolova

Polina was born in the city of Perm, where she grew up and graduated from law school. There she started her career in IT companies, working in software and technology IP protection. She has spent the last few years working in cybersecurity, including focusing on building partnerships in the cybersphere and computer forensics regulatory issues. Polina is now a master's student at the University of Geneva in the program Innovations, Human Development and Sustainability. Her research interests include digital sustainability and digital responsibility for energy-saving approaches. She is inspired by women leaders who are thriving in a competitive digital world and driving global innovation forward.