

Hal Folts

is Senior Systems Engineer for the Emergency Telecommunications Service in the National Communications System NCS. He is on assignment to the NCS from NASA where he previously served as manager of Distributed Systems and networks for the Earth Observing System. Over his 40 year career he has been involved in the design and implementation of a wide variety of telecommunication facilities and developing many industry standards.