Biography

Ali Abdullah

Ali graduated B.sc in Computer Science in 2013. He had previously studied B.sc in Community medicine and Public Health, and is currently undergoing Masters in Public Health.

In 2016, he joined the Ministry of Health in Yemen, and was responsible for Monitoring and Evaluation of Primary health Programs, research and implementation of a health information system at the Health facility level, and data analysis and dashboards for contemporary outbreaks.

In 2019, he has joined the World Health Organization - Eastern Mediterranean Regional Office(EMRO) to assist the Emergency Department by researching and developing the software needed to facilitate the different functions of a Public health Emergency Operation Centers , found in most Member Sates in the region, within their respective Ministries of health.

His current research interests are IT/ICT tools that would timely detect and verify emergency events, and IT/ICT solutions that would facilitate response for previously mentioned emergency events.