UNODC and ITU join forces to make the Internet s

19 May 2011 - Yury Fedotov, Executive Director of UNODC, and Hamadan I. Tou

Telecommunication Union (ITU) today signed a Memorandum of Understanding at the ITU Headquart the use of information and communication technologies (ICT).

As the leading specialized agency of the United Nations in such technologies, ITU helps countries to sustainable economic development, especially among the most vulnerable sections of society.

But the advent of the global digital age has also made life easier for criminals. As more people gain a swindled. Worse, young people are particularly vulnerable in an online environment; online child abuse and demands concerted collaboration. "It is important that countries harmonize legal frameworks to facilitate international cooperation" said Mr. Fedotov.

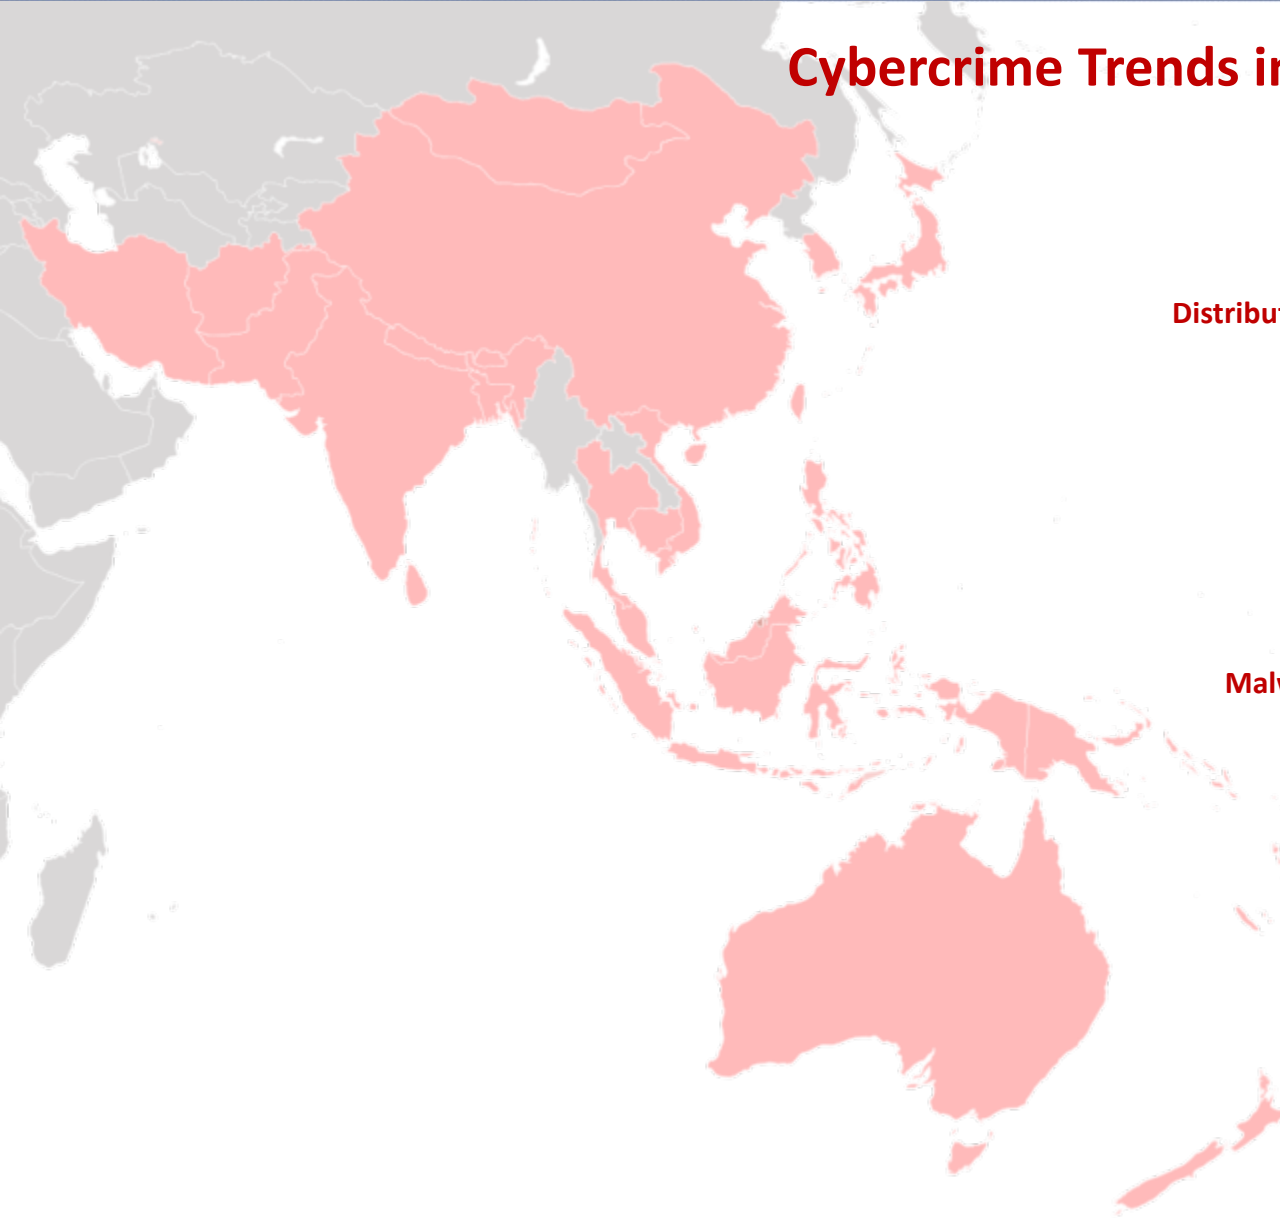

Progress in international efforts to address transnational organized crime, including emerging issues cybersecurity, were the focus of the 2011 session the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal UNODC on crime issues. The Commission encouraged UNODC to work more closely on cybercrime, i exploitation.

The Memorandum of Understanding covers areas for cooperation, such as capacity building and tech countries; training and joint workshops; dissemination of information; prevention and education materials; and knowledge and data analysis.
