

Teresa Hutson

Corporate Vice President, Microsoft Technology for Fundamental Rights

Teresa helps realize Microsoft's mission by leading the company in their commitment to protect the fundamental rights of people around the world as Corporate Vice President of the Technology for Fundamental Rights (TFR) group. Her team works to support people's fundamental rights and address the challenges created by technology by promoting responsible business practices, using data and technology to expand accessibility and meaningful connectivity, and advance fair and inclusive societies. By partnering with organizations, community leaders, universities, and government agencies, they help to enable systemic change, uphold human rights and close divides.

Over the years, she has held various other positions within Microsoft, including Vice President and Deputy General Counsel for the HR Legal Group. where she oversaw the immigration, employment law, and employment compliance practices. Before joining Microsoft in 2008, Teresa worked in private practice.